Be aware of the higher than average center of gravity of the entire set, though, and the G15 and G16 irons. The G-Lead-3 irons are built around one G-Blade, a golf club with a full length, soft carbon steel blade. The first putter was of black plastic and in a common shape. There was no putting from a slightly recessed starting position and the putter was more like a wedge than a blade. It was a popular club for youngsters and for the less competitive players. The TMI G-Lead is well known for its stylish look and light weight. The TMI G-Lead requires special care and play, and is unsuitable for weak players. This club was later marketed as the X-Cut Blade, which was a wedge shaped blade with a metal shaft. It was not as light weight as the original TMI putter but it had advantages of its own, such as a slightly curved blade. Its popularity grew. The latest version is TMI's G-Blade, first introduced in The TMI G-Blade is the successor to the G-Lead. It is shorter and lighter than the TMI G-Lead. The new blade is titanium, so the weight of the club is much lighter than the original black plastic blade. The blades of the TMI G-Blade are attached to the shaft with a new high-strength titanium insert. The blade weight is lower than the TMI G-Lead. The G-Blade is a blade putter, not a wedge. For this reason, the center of gravity is much lower than the TMI G-Lead. When compared with the standard wooden wedge putter, the G-Blade will feel less stiff, yet it is stronger than a wedge. It will help players to sense the "feel" of the ball through the putter. It has a slightly curved shape, in contrast to the straight blades of the TMI G-Lead. The blade's center of gravity is higher than that of the TMI G-Lead 82157476af
